"BATTLE OF THE MONONGAHELA, BRADDOCK'S DEFEAT"

Painted 1858 by Emanuel Leutze

Purchased and presented to Carnegie Free Library of Braddock by the children of Braddock public and parochial schools.

"This battle, depicting the defeat of the young British General Braddock by American Indians, in July, 1755, marks the beginning of the struggle between the French and their Indian allies and the British for the permanent possession of what is now Pittsburgh. General Braddock persisted in conducting his campaign according to European tactics, notwithstanding George Washington, then a Colonel in the Provincial Army, had warned him of the danger of such proceedings in warring against a savage foe. Disregarding Colonel Washington's advice, the British force of about 2,000 men was ambushed and put to rout, General Braddock himself falling from his horse mortally wounded. The painting portrays this tragic moment. Colonel Washington is shown directing the placing of a cannon to cover the retreat. Old United States Army Indian fighters who have seen this picture declare it to be a realistic representation of a typical Indian attack from ambushade."

Loaned by the Carnegie Free Library of Braddock, Pennsylvania

"FRANKLIN AND BRADDOCK"

Painted in 1900 by Frederick James, of Philadelphia

Purchased and presented to Carnegie Free Library of Braddock by the children of Braddock public and parochial schools.

The painting represents Benjamin Franklin and General Braddock discussing the proposed expedition to Fort Duquesne. Franklin has just warned Braddock of the danger of an attack from ambush by the Indians and cautioned him against drawing out his line too far, lest it might be "Cut in two like a shoe string." Braddock, highly incensed that a provincial philosopher should offer suggestions about fighting, to him, a trained military general, jumps to his feet and exclaims:

"These savages may, indeed, be a formidable enemy to your raw American militia; but upon the king's regular and disciplined troops, sir, it is impossible they should make any impression." (See Franklin's Autobiography).

The artist has seized upon this point of the conversation for his painting; and in pose, dress and facial expression has brought out in a wonderful manner the character of Franklin, the cunning, cool-headed philosopher, and of Braddock, the brave, arrogant, impetuous general.

STEPHEN C. FOSTER

By Clough

Born July 4, 1826, in Lawrenceville, Pittsburgh, approximately on the site where stands the "Stephen C. Foster Homestead," donated to the City of Pittsburgh by James H. Park, Esq. Died January 13, 1864; was buried in Allegheny Cemetery, not far from his birthplace. Pupil of Rev. Joseph Stockton, Principal of Allegheny (or Pittsburgh) Academy in "Allegheny town," which later became the University of Western Pennsylvania, now University of Pittsburgh. It is said he was not a good student, preferring excursions into forest and field. Nevertheless, became a distinguished composer and author of American ballads and songs, among them "Old Folks at Home," "Old Kentucky Home," "Come Where My Love Lies Dreaming," and "Old Memories."

"Fondly old memories recall round my heart
Scenes of my early joys that never depart.

Warmed in their sunny rays, Hopes brightly burn.
Say not those happy days can never return."

STEPHEN C. FOSTER HOMESTEAD

On the site of Stephen C. Foster's birthplace in Lawrenceville, on Penn Avenue near 36th Street, purchased by Mr. James H. Park and presented to the City of Pittsburgh as a memorial to the Composer in April 1914. Here are collected an increasing number of relics of Foster, and a visit to the shrine is worth while.

PAGES FROM NOTE BOOK OF STEPHEN C. FOSTER

Photographed by H. C. Anderson

Note book containing memoranda in pencil, showing Foster's methods of composition, both music and words. The photographs show notes on "Swanee River" and "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," about which Foster's biographer, William Morrison Foster, states as follows: "One day in 1851, Stephen came into my office, on the bank of the Monongahela, Pittsburgh, and said to me, 'What is a good name of two syllables for a Southern river? I want to use it in this new song of "Old Folks at Home."' I asked him how Yazoo would do, 'Oh,' said he, 'that has been used before.' I then suggested Pedee. 'Oh, pshaw,' he replied, 'I won't have that.' I then took down an atlas from the top of my desk and opened the map of the United States. We both looked over it and my finger stopped at the "Swanee," a little river in Florida, emptying into the Gulf of Mexico. 'That's it, that's it exactly,' exclaimed he delighted, as he wrote the name down; and the song was finished, commencing 'Way Down Upon de Swanee Ribber.' He left the office, as was his custom, abruptly, without saying another word, and I resumed my work."

"Stephen never went away from home to stay again, as long as his mother and father lived. The latter was an invalid, and was confined to his room for four years before his death, which took place July 27, 1855. Stephen was attentive and devoted to his sick father as long as the latter lived. The sentiment of the poetry in the song of 'Massa's in de Cold, Cold Ground' expresses his own experience and feelings."

WILLIAM BARCLAY FOSTER

1779—1855

Father of Stephen C. Foster. One of original Trustees of Canonsburg Academy, founded 1791, the first "outpost" of learning west of Allegheny Mountains, later Jefferson College, and finally merged with Washington College. Quartermaster and Commissary United States Army, War of 1812. A great patriot, gave liberally in time and money, and donated a piece of ground in Lawrenceville to be "a burial ground for our soldiers forever." A monument has been erected on this ground, bearing inscription on one side: "In honor of the American soldiers who lie buried here. We will emulate their patriotism and protect their remains"; and on the other, "This ground was given in 1814 by Colonel William B. Foster, the founder of Lawrenceville, as a burial ground for our soldiers." Mayor of Allegheny 1842-1843.

With his father, Peter Shoenberger, M.D., and brother, founded Shoenberger & Company, who owned and operated the Juniata Iron Mills, extending from Fourteenth to Sixteenth street, along the Allegheny river, now a part of the American Steel & Wire Company, in the City of Pittsburgh. Was President of the Exchange National Bank of Pittsburgh, and the founder by his will of St. Margaret Memorial Hospital at Forty-sixth and Butler streets, in memory of his wife, Margaret Cust Shoenberger. He was for forty years warden of Trinity Church, and the present church edifice was built principally through his generosity.

GEORGE KEEPORT STEVENSON
1828-1910

Crayon

John W. Alexander attended Pittsburgh High School with Wm. H. Stevenson, son of the subject of this drawing. He left in 1874, aspiring to be an artist, and rented studio in a block on Fifth Avenue, occupied by Oliver McClintock & Co., at which time he made this portrait. It is interesting to compare the early work of the artist with a later portrait now in the gallery, that of Col. E. J. Allen. So far as known, this is the only work by Alexander at this period of his life.

GEORGE WASHINGTON

1732—1799

By Mary Peale, daughter of Rubens Peale and Eliza Patterson Peale and granddaughter of Charles Wilson Peale

On October 19, 1770, General Washington visited Fort Pitt. He lodged, as he writes in his journal, at "the house of one Mr. Semple." This house was at the corner of Water and Ferry Streets; was built of logs, roughly hewn, and was the first shingle roofed house in Pittsburgh. Washington was also at Pittsburgh on the twenty-second of October, as he records in his journal: "Stayed at Pittsburgh all day; invited the officers and some other gentlemen to dine with me at Semple's, among whom was one Dr. Connelly, nephew to General Croghan."

MODELS ILLUSTRATING EARLY METHODS OF TRANSPORTATION.

Property of Carnegie Museum

STAGE COACH, as used for passenger traffic between Pittsburgh and Philadelphia. These coaches had a regular schedule; the fare was twenty dollars per passenger and the incidental charges of the journey amounted to seven dollars. The time of the journey was six days.

ONE-HORSE SHAY. The earliest type of the buggy. The name of this vehicle was derived from a fancied singular of the French word Chaise.

DRAY WITH SKID ATTACHED. These drays were common along the wharves of Pittsburgh until recent years. Now they have completely disappeared.

SECTIONAL CANAL-BOAT, as used on the old Portage Railroad. These boats, built in sections which bolted together, were used between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The eastern canal route ended at Hollidaysburg. Here the sections were uncoupled and each section put upon a car by running the cars into the water underneath the boat. The sections were then taken over the mountains by rail and inclined plane and placed in the western canal, at which point the sections were coupled again and continued their journey to Pittsburgh.

CANAL LOCK, worked by hand, used on the Erie Canal and the Old Portage Canal.

FIRST TYPE OF PASSENGER CAR used on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

TWO-PASSENGER CARS used on the Pennsylvania Railroad about the year 1857.

OHIO RIVER FLAT-BOAT, used about the year 1800.

OHIO RIVER KEEL-BOAT, used in the early nineteenth century.

STEAMBOAT "NEW ORLEANS," the first boat on a western river propelled by steam. Built by Fulton & Livingston at Pittsburgh, making its first trip from Pittsburgh to New Orleans in the winter of 1812. The time consumed on this passage was fourteen days.

OHIO RIVER STEAMBOAT in use about the year 1814.

CONESTOGA WAGON. This type of wagon was used in the early days in conveying freight across the mountains.

THE CANAL BOAT "JENNIE BINGHAM." A passenger packet of the Pittsburgh and Freeport Line.
